

Here Is One of Stars at Rabbit Show

Rabbit prices are going up. The advance does not apply to just the ordinary wild and domestic food varieties, but the breeds which trace their ancestry back through the years are showing enhanced value. More than 25 different rabbit types are being shown at the exhibition under the auspices of the South Bend and Mishawaka Breeders and Fanciers' association, now being held over the Merchants Bank building, 231 S. Michigan st.

During the last two days the show has been visited by hundreds of persons. Association officials declare that the real value of breeding rabbits for commercial purposes is just beginning to be appreciated and the exposition is to promote expansion of the industry. The show will extend until next Tuesday.

The steel gray Flemish Giant specimen pictured is valued at more than $300. It is owned by W. H. Whitner, Mishawaka, one of the largest breeders and authorities on the industry in the country. More than 300 rabbits are included in the show, representing entries from five states.

CONFESSIONS OF A MOVIE STAR

An hour later Jimmy Alcott was summoned to his darkened room. He came as composedly as if he were paying me a formal call. No one would have suspected that he was awaiting a decision which would determine his future.

The doctor had departed. The nurse had been sent from the room. Mother dear remained at my side. Mother dear could neither laugh nor cry over the doctor's decision.

"It's all right, Jimmy," she said softly. "Too good to be true, after the agonizing doubts of the past weeks."

The room was very dark. My eyes, no longer bandaged, could not endure a ray of light.

I hailed Jimmy with:

"Feel there?"

"Why, it's not much more than an enlarged vein," Jimmy said. Then he stooped and kissed the long scar on my forehead. He kissed my lips, my lips.

And this ought to be the place to write "Fade Out," but there is a little more to tell.

"The doctor says that it never will show under a liberal coat of grease paint and powder! And so I do not intend to give up my profession, Jimmy!"

"I was afraid you would not need me—if the verdict turned out this way," Jimmy's voice was a dull monotone. "I get your point of view, May! I never had any luck about you from the beginning."

Jimmy was by this time half way to the door.

"Understand, it's all right. I suppose we'll have to finish 'Love Lorn' together. Then I'll get out of your way. I'll go back to London."

"And throw down the chance Masters offered you? Refuse to be a star?"

"I forgot about that. But it makes no difference. I'll go back to England."

"Don't start until you've heard me out, Jimmy. I'm going to stay in the movies because I have a purpose in my work at last. I intend to visualize for women everywhere the highest ideals of love."

"It's time somebody did!"

"I want to make men see that when they cheat their homes, they're not 'smart' because they cheat themselves; when they lie like Hutcheson Coleridge to his wife, they make all love a lie, they lie to themselves. I've ideas for worth-while plays, Jimmy. But they all end with the truth about life and love."

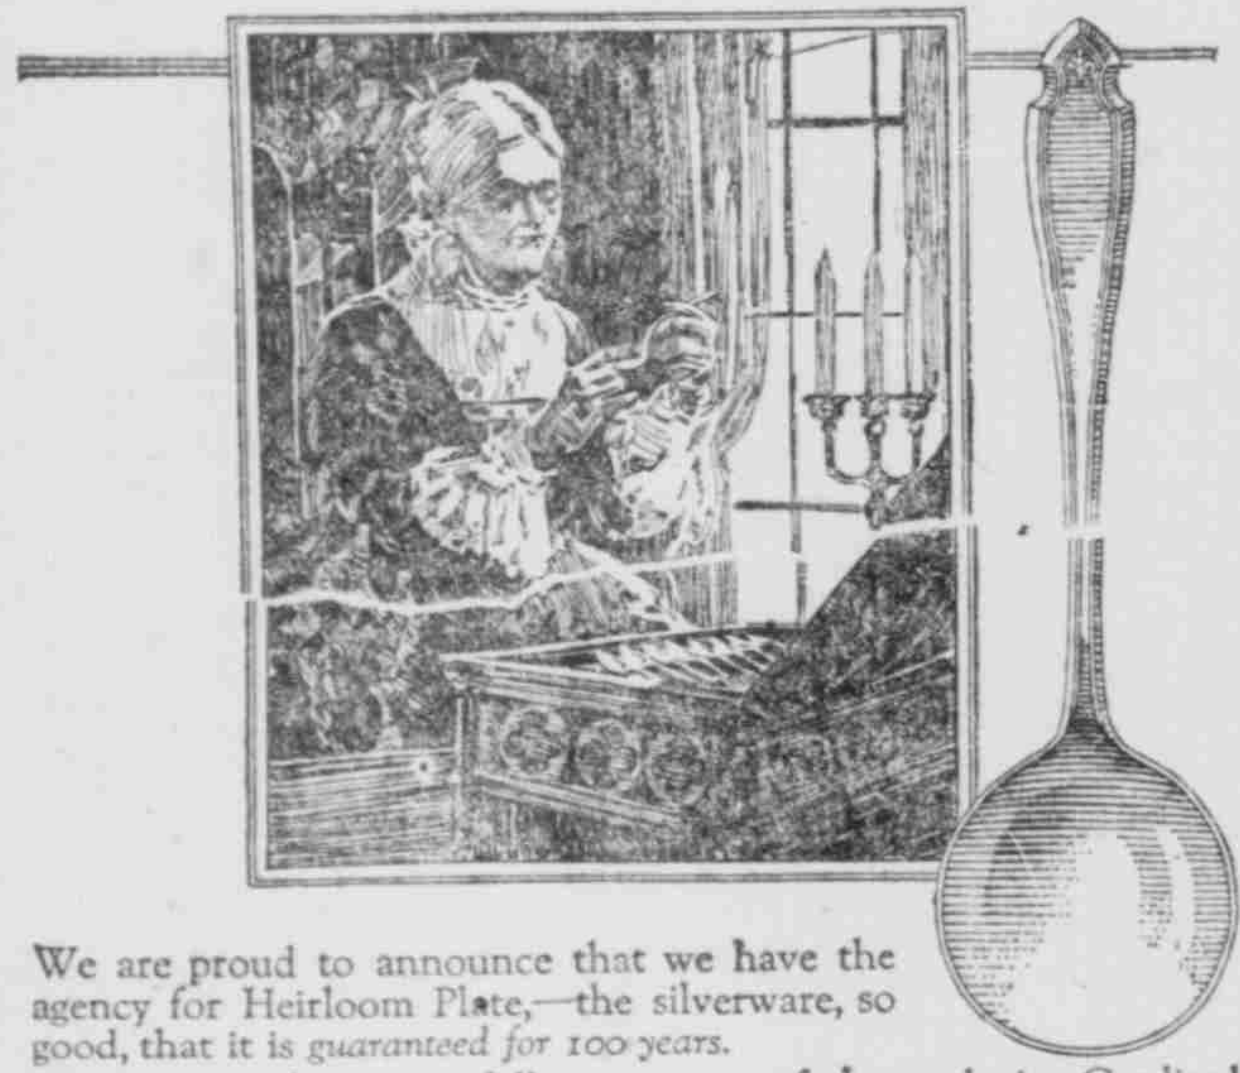

"What's that, May?"

"Only passion dies! Love lasts forever!"

"It's a corking theme, May. For a

"But however will I know how to act, Jimmy unless I make a model home for myself? And how can I make—a model home unless—with a model—husband?"

I'm afraid that the ensuing close-up never would have passed the censors.

TAXICABS IN PARIS CALLED DANGEROUS

PARIS, Jan. 7.—The Paris pedestrian is up in arms against the taxi chauffeurs, who have made walking on the streets of Paris a dangerous diversion.

As the French press pays little attention to accident stories the toll of deaths and injuries wrought by reckless motor traffic does not get the attention of the public. A committee of the town council, which has investigated the situation, which has investigated the situation, puts the daily number of accidents at a hundred.

ENGLISH ORGANIZE CLUBS FOR LUNCH

LONDON, Jan. 7.—Tired of grubbing at the high cost of food in restaurants, the young men of London have taken to organizing luncheon clubs on a subscription basis.

Instead of paying about 50 cents for their luncheon, the young men claim they are able to give a better meal for about a shilling and a half. Also there is the added convenience of no waiting.

Over 30 of these amateur luncheon clubs have already been organized, and the idea is spreading so rapidly as to cause alarm to restaurant keepers.

CLEVELAND MAN TELLS HOW TO BUILD UP AN APPETITE

Bring Back Old-Time "Pep" This Time of The Year.

"I wouldn't drag through another winter feeling half-sick, weak, and rundown for anybody. Last year just about this time I was feeling draggy and had and would stumble home after the day's work feeling too tired to eat. I lost my appetite and was all-in. I heard about Hypo-Cod. Put my prejudices behind me and it did the work fine. I felt dandy the balance of the winter. Took on new life and pep and enjoyed a whole of an appetite. No wonder when this winter came around I got myself a couple bottles of Hypo-Cod. The quick change in weather gets you so I took time by the forelock and built myself up again. Hereafter every Fall and Spring I'm going to spend a few cents on Earle's Hypo-Cod and keep in trim the year round. It's a dandy tonic," declared Mr. Frank A. Mathis, 7012 Central Ave., Cleveland. (Suite 3.) Mr. Mathis says Hypo-Cod is a wonderful tonic for young and old—a real blood builder and appetizer and cleans out the system. Thousands of people right here in town take Earle's Hypo-Cod regularly a couple times each year just to keep lined up. They thus avoid minor spells of sickness. They know it is practically impossible for a person to keep the system up to par without the aid of a tonic now and then and when weak and rundown a person is apt to contract all sorts of sickness and sickness is expensive.

Earle's Hypo-Cod puts the system in good shape this time of year and no one should go through the winter with coughs, colds and kindred wintery ills. Druggists, chemists, and experts assert results are splendid when Hypo-Cod is used. It is a modern, powerful, nice-tasting tonic which accomplishes its work day and weeks sooner.

Note—The genuine Earle's Hypo-Cod can be secured at the Central Drug Store, American Drug Co., London Drug Co., in South Bend; and the Red Cross Pharmacy, Mishawaka.

What Napoleon Said Applies to Everyone

"An army," said Napoleon, "travels on its stomach," which is true not only of the hordes of war, but of all of us mortal battlers in the great contest of Life.

Food we have a plenty, but what we need is certain kinds of food above all else. Our systems require more of vegetables and green stuffs and less of meats and sweets.

Today there is a crying need for truck farms over the length and breadth of our country. Present sources are exhausted as soon as their products reach the market.

That is why the Steenburg Farms, through our Pleasant Valley tract will mean so much to this as well as adjoining communities. Their products will better enable us to "travel on our stomach."

Celery, lettuce, cabbage, potatoes, beans, peas, beets and the like have in the rich, black muck land flanking the headwaters of the Kankakee an ideal place to thrive and to grow abundantly.

Pleasant Valley products from Steenburg Farms will find an ample market right here in St. Joseph County.
